

Variation in unmet mental health needs among Black adult groups

A study by the UCLA Center for Health Policy Research reports that the unmet need for mental health services among Black adults in California is higher for adults identifying as multiracial Black and Latinx and adults who are non-native.

Demographics of Black Adults in California

Black adults by racial and ethnic identity

Of the 24% identifying as multiracial ...

*Includes American Indian and Alaska Native, Asian, Native Hawaiian/Pacific Islander, or "other racial group."

Note: Figures for multiracial Black groups are rounded and may not total 100%

Black adults by nativity

Needed Mental Health Services

Among Black adults who reported serious or moderate psychological distress

By racial identity

By nativity

Needed But Didn't Receive Mental Health Services (Had Unmet Need)

Among Black adults who reported serious or moderate psychological distress

By racial identity

By nativity

